

I'm writing to you to express my sincere satisfaction with New Jersey's "Do Not Call" list. Not only would it be infringing upon state's rights to overturn NJ's stringent regulations on telemarketers, but it would also be unreasonable. The "Do Not Call List" program has enabled families to eat dinner uninterrupted by unsolicited phone calls once again. We waste less time turning down products we don't want when these annoying calls are not made to our homes. Please do NOT weaken New Jersey's consumer protection laws! We New Jersians obviously like - and feel the urgent need for - the list if we're signing up for it, which we are. And if your concerns are for the wellbeing of the telemarketers, please consider this: having had friends with some experience in that field, I can say that they're better off reconsidering their profession and finding another way to advertise that does not infringe upon people's privacy. Thank you.
